The *P. aeruginosa* QS-sensor RhlR: a new structural model for a bHLH-family DNA binding protein. The timing of QS gene expression in Pseudomonas aeruginosa is controlled by a linear hierarchical gene regulatory cascade. QS molecules, N-3-oxo-dodecanoyl-L-homoserine lactone (3OC12-HSL) and N-butryl-L-homoserine lactone (C4-HSL), are synthesized by LuxI and LuxR homologs, respectively. The autoinducers bind to their cognate transcriptional activator proteins to modulate target gene expression. In this study, we have solved the crystal structure of the RhlR protein (PA-3C-RhlR), a transmembrane protein belonging to the bHLH-family of DNA binding proteins with putative phosphor-transferase activity. RhlR shows the characteristic bHLH fold and comprises two PAS (Per/Arnt/Sim) domains, a PAC (PER-ARNT-SIM) domain, two functional Per and ARNT domains, and one alternative HTH (helix-turn-helix) helix. A ligand-binding pocket for autoinducers is present in the RING-finger/SIGMA domain. The crystal structure of the PA-3C-RhlR-3OC12-HSL and PA-3C-RhlR-C4-HSL complexes identifies H84, H90, and R147 as the amino acids involved in HSL recognition. The structural models of RhlR, the 'classic' dimeric and symmetric bHLH-motif of RhlR:RhlR interaction, and the monomeric bHLH-motif of RhlR:RhlR:HSL complexes are discussed.***
