Chroma is a utility for installing and supporting Chromium (the new open source Chrome engine) extensions on Microsoft Windows. It's based on Chromium's Chrome Web Store and, as such, allows you to install all the extensions developed specifically for Google Chrome. Chroma installs the extensions on your computer and lets you manage them with the Magic Wand. There is no way to save or uninstall extensions from within Chroma. You don't need to have Chrome installed to use Chroma. It works with Microsoft Internet Explorer 9 and higher, which means that you can also install Chroma on PCs that don't support Chrome. This release is a semi-rolling release, meaning that new versions of Chroma are released only after new versions of Chromium. Install / Uninstall Chroma isn't installed as a standalone program. Instead, it's accessible from Chrome's Add-ons menu, either from the Extensions tab or by selecting Extensions > Install from other extensions. Clicking on this link takes you to a page where you can search for Chroma's alternative links (directly from Google or through reseller versions), or you can use the Magic Wand to install or uninstall extensions. Once an extension is installed, it's automatically started and accessible from the Extensions menu. Manage To access your extensions, simply type Chroma in the Start menu or search for it in the Start menu. From the Extensions menu, you can perform the following actions:  Access installed extensions and manage their permissions.  Remove an extension.  Remove or replace a theme.  Change the base theme.  View all installed extensions.  Add or remove any extension (allowing you to quickly switch to a theme that supports the extension in question). As an alternative, you can right-click on the extension's thumbnail to access the extension's options. You also have the option to remove all extensions from your Windows desktop.  Select an option.  Highlight an extension.  Click the Remove button to remove the selected extension.  Click the Uninstall button to remove all extensions.  Click the Back button to return to the Extensions page.
